2. Create a new file in Photoshop and name it "My Favorite Places" (see Figure 10-1). Use your starting image as a template. Your new file will be a Smart Object. You can't edit this image from the original image. Instead, you use the New Layer and Fill dialog boxes to make a completely new image using the template. Your new file is a Smart Object and also a linked file. If you'd rather use a Photoshop template, make a new document with the same width and height as the original. Apply the Smart Objects options (Crop, Align, Blur, and so on). Then click Save from the File menu to make a Smart Object. You can also double-click the template file in Bridge to open it in Photoshop's editor. Just be sure that you save the file as a Photoshop file. There are no Smart Objects in Bridge's template file. 3. Select the Elliptical Marquee tool. Make sure that you're in Select Mode, as shown on the left in Figure 10-1. Then select an area on your starting image that's about the same size as the 3 pixels wide by 7 pixels tall frame around the border of the frame you drew in step 2. The Elliptical Marquee is fairly basic. You can't zoom into an area; you can only make an approximately circular selection. If you haven't already guessed, you're probably most familiar with this tool from selecting a portion of a photo. In this case, you just want to make a selection that's a rectangle that's about 3 pixels wide by 7 pixels tall. To do so, Shift+click to select a rectangle. Then double-click the center of the selection. When you double-click, you create a new selection that is the same size as the original selection, with the two overlapped areas sealed, such as the one shown in Figure 10-2. 4. Once you select the outer area, choose Selection⇒Path⇒Fill. The selected area is now filled with a layer mask of black and white that's used to hide the areas that aren't part of your photo. 5. Use the Spot Healing Brush tool to clean up any areas of overexposure in the photo where the mountains are too bright. If you have a photo that's been edited and retouched, you may need to adjust the brightness and
